

BRIDE AND MAID-OF-HONOR AT NOTABLE WEDDING

SELDOM has a wedding attracted the attention of Honolulu folk as that of Miss Lydia McStocker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. McStocker, and Dr. Arnett P. Matthews, U. S. A., which was solemnized at Central Union Church on Thursday evening, Dr. Doremus Scudder officiating. The prominence of the McStocker family combined with the popularity of the young couple tended to make it of unusual interest—an interest sufficient to fill the big church on Beretania street to overflowing with friends and well-wishers. That it was a beautiful wedding was the verdict of all. The church was decorated with artistic simplicity. The altar was banked with palms and ferns and masses of white lilies, roses, carnations and asters. An occasional cluster of pink roses lent a charming note of color. Here and there misty bows of tulle caught the blossoms and ferns. The center aisle was outlined with ferns and pale pink carnations. Just before the entrance of the bride party, this was lined with whorls of white satin ribbon. Upon the first strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the ribbons were untied and draped by the leading ushers thus outlining the aisle. The color scheme of the bridal party were the pastel shades of lavender, blue and pink. Immediately following the ushers—Lieut. L. S. Vester, N. Campanole, Robert Guthrie and Dr. Leo Mudd—in the order of procession were Miss Rose Herbert and Miss Sara Lucas. Their gowns were of dainty lavender charmeuse, draped with chiffon and shadowed lace and adorned with jeweled pasteries. Next in line were Miss Harriet Lucas and Miss Florence Hoffman in blue—their gowns of charmeuse being gracefully draped and trimmed with shadow lace and tulle. Miss Julie McStocker, the maid of honor immediately preceded the bride. She was charmingly dressed in shell pink crepe meteor with draperies of shadow lace upon the bodice. Both bridesmaids and maid of honor carried cluster bouquets of pale pink carnations and maiden hair caught with bows of pink tulle ribbon. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of ivory white charmeuse. It was smartly draped and made with a long narrow train outlined with a pleated ruche of valenciennes lace. The exquisite shadow face which adorned the bodice was brought down the side of the skirt and out upon the train where it was caught with orange blossoms. Her veil was of misty white tulle and caught about her face in a semi-cap effect with orange blossoms. Her only jewels were an exquisite diamond bar pin set in platinum, the gift of her mother, and a diamond ring the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was a cluster of starry eyed white hyacinths and maiden hair, tied with tulle. This upon being thrown later in the evening, was caught by Miss Rose Herbert of whom, now, great things are expected. After the ceremony, a small reception and supper were held at the McStocker residence on Lunaillo street for the bridal party and relatives. The house was a bower of roses in all shades of white, pink, yellow and crimson. The bridal table was banked with pink La France roses and ferns knotted here and there with bows of gauze ribbon. The wedding cake occupying position of honor, was a thing of beauty with its dainty frosted roses and silver leaves. A Hawaiian quintet played during the evening and after supper the guests danced—led off by the bride and groom. Shortly after eleven the young couple made their escape to a place as yet unrevealed where they were spending their honeymoon. The bride's going away dress was of copper shaded silk with introductions of indigo and purple Persian embroidery. A small white chiffon hat with a fantastic quill finished the costume. Mrs. F. B. McStocker, the mother of the bride wore a beautiful gown of cream white charmeuse with a tunic of net and silver bugle trimming. A French touch of color was added by a butterfly bow of orange tulle on the bodice, one end of which was brought down the side and fastened on the skirt. The gifts of the bride to her maids were charming silver vanity cases, while the groom presented his best man, Dr. Harry Deiber, and the ushers with gold cuff-links inscribed not only with their initials but with the initials of the bridal couple as well. After their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Matthews will occupy a charming little bungalow on Young and Punahou streets until such time as when the former will be ordered to another army post. They plan to be thoroughly established and at home to their friends after April first.
